SERVICE BUS KILLS POSTMAN ON BALLARAT ROAD.

Edward Horwood, aged 63 years, a contract letter carrier, and a married man with a wife and family, living at 20 Pickett street, Footscray, whilst engaged in his ordinary work, on Tuesday, about 10.15 a.m., was knocked down by a heavy service bus on the Ballarat road, near Irving's store, and received such severe head injuries that he died at Mout Pellier hospital about noon.

The circumstances in which the unfortunate man met his death are the subject of conflicting testimony. He had a bicycle and was riding it at the time. One account says that he had just delivered a letter and was going along the road when the bus, striving to pass another, smashed into him. It is said that he was in the act of turning into Richelieu street, and had put out his hand when he was struck. The bicycle was uninjured, and from this it has been deduced that deceased was walking, but the balance of evidence is the other way.

The daily press seems to have received no information of the occurrence.

The burial took place at Footscray cemetery on Thursday. Much sympathy is expressed with the bereaved wife and family by Mandstone residents whom he had faithfully served for the past two years. A wreath and many flowers laid on the grave testified to their respect.
